

The RECORD-UNION is the only paper on the coast, outside of San Francisco, that receives the full Associated Press dispatches from all parts of the world. Outside of San Francisco it has no competitor, in point of numbers, in its home and general circulation throughout the coast.

SAN FRANCISCO AGENCY.
L. F. FISHER is sole agent for this paper in San Francisco and vicinity. He is authorized to receive advertisements and subscriptions, and to collect for the same. Rooms 21 and 22, West Main Exchange.

NEWS OF THE MORNING.

FOREIGN.—Parnell will make eight speeches in England, it is said. Gladstone addressed the people of Glasgow last night. The French Senate has adopted the bill of the Chamber of Deputies in regard to the expulsion of the priests. Silver in London, 44 1/2; consols, 101 1/2; 4 1/2, 112 1/2.

EASTERN.—Sandwiches made from canned meats poisoned over 200 persons at a festival in Petersburg, N. J. The Governor of Louisiana has signed the Sunday law. A Convention of photographers is in session at St. Louis. Belle Sager was drowned Monday near Glenwood Springs, Col. No jury has been obtained at Chicago in the anarchist trial. The wholesale harness and saddle manufacturers are holding a National Convention at Pittsburgh. Government bonds are quoted in New York at 124 1/2 for 4s of 1907; 111 1/2 for 4 1/2s; 102 1/2 for 5s; sterling, $4 86 1/4; silver, 98.

WASHINGTON.—Cleveland will probably veto the anti-Chinese bill if it passes the Senate. The President yesterday approved nine pension bills. Pierce H. Ryan has been appointed Register of the Land Office at Honolulu. The Pacific Coast. Fire on Lake Tahoe: Loss, $30,000. The schooner winery at Yuba City has been destroyed by fire. Poison put in his dinner-pail caused the death of John Buiotti at Grizzly Flat, El Dorado county. Peter Castino shot and seriously wounded Joseph Sims near San Mateo. N. B. Nelson fell from a load of hay near Santa Rosa, and was killed. Jack Sullivan has been appointed Sheriff of Calaveras, Nev. An infanticidal attempt was made by a man to rob a street-car at San Jose.

PREPARING FOR MORE BOMB-THROWING.

Of what sort of timber is society composed in Chicago? It is but a few weeks ago that a bomb thrown in Russia at despotism, passed over the seas and continents and struck liberty in Chicago. Over the dead and mangled bodies of her policemen, that city rose in her might and swore in her wrath that such things should never again take place. The people realized at last that the same murderous sentiment that would aim a bomb at a Car, would cast it at the feet of free institutions, with a shout of hurra. The bomb in the hand of the Anarchist is against all order, all regulation, all possession, all property, all family relations, all decency, all things except license, lawlessness and murder. But here in June, on the 14th day, and while yet the widows and orphans of the Anarchist bomb sit with undried eyes, Chicago permits these cranks, murderers, outcasts and enemies of society, to "picnic" within her borders, and there to preach loudly the same old doctrine, and advise to the same old practice, and generally to indulge in all violence of rant, robbery and the upturning of orderly government. Yet in this same city, not four weeks ago, a Judge charged a Grand Jury that such proceedings as this was in violation of existing laws, and that should be prevented, whereas all Chicago applauded. The extract from one of the speeches delivered at the "picnic" it was made up of an enthusiastic rant made Verplanck imported for the occasion:

What is law? Law is the code of tyranny. What are the police? They are the agents of the law; they are the architects of God's wrath in Chicago's heresies on the night of May 4th. Would that you had been better prepared and that your engines of destruction had been more numerous. But I am sure that next time which is swiftly coming, we will tear the liver from the scoundrel's chest and hurl their barred and creaked chairs to the sea.

And this by an unbalanced ruffian named Murdock from St. Louis:

I smash my teeth with unavailing rage when I think of the brave and noble men pined in this prison of Chicago. I think of the enemies, their strain is desperate and their hatreds face me as terrible. O that we must not sit idly by and contemplate these outrages. But our day of reckoning will come, and the tyrants and all must die. The double-edged sword incarnate chains merits will get it, too, if liberty ever claims her own.

Now Carter Harrison is Mayor of Chicago. He was very brave with words on the occasion of the Haymarket massacre. He was really thought this Democratic warrior had been killed in earnest and was going forth to do battle for law and order. He knew this police was to take place. He knew—it was his duty to have known—just what the gathering was for, but he did nothing except to withdraw all the police from the vicinity and to give the bandits a free field. This action is inconceivable until one reflects that there is to be an election in Chicago presently, and the Democratic party, of which Carter Harrison is chief cook in Cook county, needs votes badly, and every other Anarchist at least has a vote or controls one. It is simply amazing that the people of Chicago will endure this sort of thing. For six years, under Carter Harrison and his stripe of administration, they were compelled to submit to the undisturbed assemblies of the Anarchist and bomb-throwers on the Lake front. He never lifted his hand as Mayor or otherwise to check them until the Haymarket massacre, and then he dared not to remain silent—it would have been as much as his life was worth to have failed of duty at that time. It is possible that Liberty is to be spit upon at these Sunday Chicago out-throat picnics with impunity, that political cranks may secure votes?

THEY ARE TO GO.

It was the apparent scheme of the Ministry that the French Princes should go. The Senate votes to exile them. The Ministry has not, indeed, original responsibility for the scheme, for the fact is that the extremists in the Assembly pushed the policy upon the Cabinet, and it lacked the courage to reject it. We know from all prior expression that the Premier is an opponent of the scheme of expulsion, yet he is a party now to its proposal, as one of the Ministry. Now that the Senate adopts the measure the Government becomes as extremely radical in one direction as the Monarchists are in the other. It boldly inaugurates a policy opposed to the spirit of republicanism, and one calculated to make some of its test friends doubt the cohesive ability of the republic. No Government can afford to confess that it fears an enemy. It may despise and reject an alien; it may limit the preaching of anarchism and forbid treasonable utterances, but it should not shun the national door in the face of one seeking to enkindle discontent. But to exile the heirs to a throne and

SHORTHAND REPORTERS.
How They Aid Criminals to Escape Punishment.

[San Francisco Post, June 22.]
H. G. Wells, who committed perjury in the Sharon case and later confessed to perjury by swearing that his first statement was false, has escaped punishment for his crime by the aid of a shorthand reporter. The shorthand reporter of the Police Court, took down the deposition of Senator William Sharon, the original investigation, after Judge Sullivan had ordered the arrest of Wells for his palpable perjury. In transcribing his notes for use in the trial, he either accidentally or deliberately wrote Alex. D. Sharon, instead of William Sharon. As the affidavit, Sharon's deposition was vital important evidence, and when District Attorney Wilson found the error in the deposition, he sent for the shorthand reporter, to see if it could be corrected in some way. O'Connor first said he had lost his notes, and later found the notes, and said that he had written down the deposition of Senator Sharon, and that he had written down the deposition of Senator Sharon, and that he had written down the deposition of Senator Sharon.

THE SAN FRANCISCO EXAMINER has done a good many vicious things, such as offending taste and the proprieties by publishing alleged portraits of leading ladies of San Francisco, with comments upon their personal appearance that were to be used in identifying them on the highway; in printing the most prominent before the public in one way and another; in assailing the Justices of the Supreme Court for deciding as they believe the law to direct; in catering to a morbid taste for the vulgar by the prominence given to various disreputable people and their life's doings. But when an offender offers something in recompense for the ill of which it has been guilty it is worthy of note. Here we find the Examiner warmly endorsing the societies for the suppression of vice, and especially making an effort corresponding in line with that of this journal has made for years to arouse public attention to the danger to society flowing from the influence of the street literature of the day upon the youthful mind, and notably the vicious pictorial literature of the news stands and show windows, and this includes a good deal of the Examiner's pictorial abomination. In seeking for the causes for crime and youthful degeneracy the public should look to these sources. Only those fully realize the enormity of the evil who have taken some time for observation in the matter. We affirm and believe that it is capable of demonstration that as many, if not more, boys and girls are led into vicious habits and to final ruin, are devoted from straight paths, and given false ideas of life and its duties, by the pictorial and cheap literature of the day, than by any other cause.

TELEGRAPHIC BRIVITIES.

In Havana Spanish gold is quoted at 157 1/2 in bars.
Parnell has agreed to make eight speeches in England, it is said.
Brighton Young's favorite wife Amelia was a cousin of Mrs. Cleveland's mother.
If the House passes the Senate anti-Chinese bill, the Bayard says that the President will veto it.
The Governor of Louisiana has signed the Sunday law. It goes into effect on the 1st of January next.
Collector Hager, Mint Superintendent at Lawrence, Kan., says that he has been collecting for the Senate.
G. O. Daniels, who was supposed to have died near Clinton, Ky., on Wednesday, was restored to life on Thursday night.
John W. Mackay has been appointed Western Vice-President of the American Exhibition to be held in London next year.
One thousand photographers, from all parts of the United States and Canada, have arrived in St. Louis to attend their seventh annual Convention.
The jury in the case of the Central Transportation Company against the Pullman Palace Company rendered a verdict at Philadelphia in favor of the Pullman Palace Company for $112,000.
Over 200 persons were poisoned at a German festival at Petersburg, N. J., by eating sandwiches made from canned meats. Nearly all are still under the treatment of physicians.
The suspension of the firm of Swift & Co., importers of sugar in New York and Pernambuco, is one of the most important business failures that have taken place in the city. The liabilities are about $1,000,000.
The Speaker on Tuesday laid before the House messages from the President, announcing his disapproval of a like number of private pension bills, and they were returned to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.
At the trial of the Chicago Anarchists, Tuesday, the entire session up to 3 o'clock in the afternoon was consumed in the arguments of the defense, and the jury was sworn in at 4 o'clock. The Court-room was crowded the entire day.
T. W. Kane & Co., brokers, of Helena, Montana, claiming to represent Wm. Martin & Co., of Chicago, have failed, not paying balances due customers. Kane says Martin & Co. have a balance sufficient to meet liabilities, but refuse to forward the same.
A Yale College student named Clarence G. Moore, of Chicago, rose in his sleep, got out of a fourth story window, slid down a stone water pipe to the ground, then ran up stairs again and broke in the door of his own room. He thought some one was chasing him. On the same night another student, named Milsby, was killed and seized as he was in the act of jumping from a third story window in his sleep.
A Glenwood Springs special to the Denver Post, Wednesday, says: Yesterday, the Bell Sager and two men were crossing the rope suspension bridge across the Kooning Fork to reach the post to which the bridge was attached pulled out of the ground and the three were thrown into the swift current, where they were killed. The bodies were washed against the bank, and escaped, but the young lady was carried into Grand river and drowned.

SAN FRANCISCO ITEMS.

The Supervisors have passed, over the Mayor's veto, a gas contract at the rate of 13 cents a lamp each night.
The United States Laundry discharged forty-five Chinese Saturday night. White men and women will take the places.
Marriage License Clerk Henry Kelen issued Monday a license permitting a man to wed the divorced wife of a brother, who is still living.
Edward Barrett, the actor, was secretly married some weeks ago to Miss Daisy Curtis, daughter of G. L. Curtis, the Oakland banker.
Dr. H. W. Harkness announces his discovery of live or six specimens of animal life and eighteen plants in Mono Lake, where it has hitherto been supposed that no form of animal life existed, with the exception of the larva of a fly.
The statement of the through freight forwarded from California in April over the routes of the Southern Pacific system has just been made public. The total is nearly 33,000,000 pounds, and the heaviest, with the exception of March, in the history of the trade.
During the past four weeks 3,990 letters have been sent from the San Francisco Postoffice to the Dead Letter Office, and the number in the corresponding period last year. The costs in the cases this year have amounted to $30,000.
Dr. H. W. Harkness announces his discovery of live or six specimens of animal life and eighteen plants in Mono Lake, where it has hitherto been supposed that no form of animal life existed, with the exception of the larva of a fly.
The statement of the through freight forwarded from California in April over the routes of the Southern Pacific system has just been made public. The total is nearly 33,000,000 pounds, and the heaviest, with the exception of March, in the history of the trade.
During the past four weeks 3,990 letters have been sent from the San Francisco Postoffice to the Dead Letter Office, and the number in the corresponding period last year. The costs in the cases this year have amounted to $30,000.

THEY ARE TO GO.

It was the apparent scheme of the Ministry that the French Princes should go. The Senate votes to exile them. The Ministry has not, indeed, original responsibility for the scheme, for the fact is that the extremists in the Assembly pushed the policy upon the Cabinet, and it lacked the courage to reject it. We know from all prior expression that the Premier is an opponent of the scheme of expulsion, yet he is a party now to its proposal, as one of the Ministry. Now that the Senate adopts the measure the Government becomes as extremely radical in one direction as the Monarchists are in the other. It boldly inaugurates a policy opposed to the spirit of republicanism, and one calculated to make some of its test friends doubt the cohesive ability of the republic. No Government can afford to confess that it fears an enemy. It may despise and reject an alien; it may limit the preaching of anarchism and forbid treasonable utterances, but it should not shun the national door in the face of one seeking to enkindle discontent. But to exile the heirs to a throne and

THEY ARE TO GO.
It was the apparent scheme of the Ministry that the French Princes should go. The Senate votes to exile them. The Ministry has not, indeed, original responsibility for the scheme, for the fact is that the extremists in the Assembly pushed the policy upon the Cabinet, and it lacked the courage to reject it. We know from all prior expression that the Premier is an opponent of the scheme of expulsion, yet he is a party now to its proposal, as one of the Ministry. Now that the Senate adopts the measure the Government becomes as extremely radical in one direction as the Monarchists are in the other. It boldly inaugurates a policy opposed to the spirit of republicanism, and one calculated to make some of its test friends doubt the cohesive ability of the republic. No Government can afford to confess that it fears an enemy. It may despise and reject an alien; it may limit the preaching of anarchism and forbid treasonable utterances, but it should not shun the national door in the face of one seeking to enkindle discontent. But to exile the heirs to a throne and

THEY ARE TO GO.

It was the apparent scheme of the Ministry that the French Princes should go. The Senate votes to exile them. The Ministry has not, indeed, original responsibility for the scheme, for the fact is that the extremists in the Assembly pushed the policy upon the Cabinet, and it lacked the courage to reject it. We know from all prior expression that the Premier is an opponent of the scheme of expulsion, yet he is a party now to its proposal, as one of the Ministry. Now that the Senate adopts the measure the Government becomes as extremely radical in one direction as the Monarchists are in the other. It boldly inaugurates a policy opposed to the spirit of republicanism, and one calculated to make some of its test friends doubt the cohesive ability of the republic. No Government can afford to confess that it fears an enemy. It may despise and reject an alien; it may limit the preaching of anarchism and forbid treasonable utterances, but it should not shun the national door in the face of one seeking to enkindle discontent. But to exile the heirs to a throne and

THEY ARE TO GO.

It was the apparent scheme of the Ministry that the French Princes should go. The Senate votes to exile them. The Ministry has not, indeed, original responsibility for the scheme, for the fact is that the extremists in the Assembly pushed the policy upon the Cabinet, and it lacked the courage to reject it. We know from all prior expression that the Premier is an opponent of the scheme of expulsion, yet he is a party now to its proposal, as one of the Ministry. Now that the Senate adopts the measure the Government becomes as extremely radical in one direction as the Monarchists are in the other. It boldly inaugurates a policy opposed to the spirit of republicanism, and one calculated to make some of its test friends doubt the cohesive ability of the republic. No Government can afford to confess that it fears an enemy. It may despise and reject an alien; it may limit the preaching of anarchism and forbid treasonable utterances, but it should not shun the national door in the face of one seeking to enkindle discontent. But to exile the heirs to a throne and

THEY ARE TO GO.

It was the apparent scheme of the Ministry that the French Princes should go. The Senate votes to exile them. The Ministry has not, indeed, original responsibility for the scheme, for the fact is that the extremists in the Assembly pushed the policy upon the Cabinet, and it lacked the courage to reject it. We know from all prior expression that the Premier is an opponent of the scheme of expulsion, yet he is a party now to its proposal, as one of the Ministry. Now that the Senate adopts the measure the Government becomes as extremely radical in one direction as the Monarchists are in the other. It boldly inaugurates a policy opposed to the spirit of republicanism, and one calculated to make some of its test friends doubt the cohesive ability of the republic. No Government can afford to confess that it fears an enemy. It may despise and reject an alien; it may limit the preaching of anarchism and forbid treasonable utterances, but it should not shun the national door in the face of one seeking to enkindle discontent. But to exile the heirs to a throne and

THEY ARE TO GO.
It was the apparent scheme of the Ministry that the French Princes should go. The Senate votes to exile them. The Ministry has not, indeed, original responsibility for the scheme, for the fact is that the extremists in the Assembly pushed the policy upon the Cabinet, and it lacked the courage to reject it. We know from all prior expression that the Premier is an opponent of the scheme of expulsion, yet he is a party now to its proposal, as one of the Ministry. Now that the Senate adopts the measure the Government becomes as extremely radical in one direction as the Monarchists are in the other. It boldly inaugurates a policy opposed to the spirit of republicanism, and one calculated to make some of its test friends doubt the cohesive ability of the republic. No Government can afford to confess that it fears an enemy. It may despise and reject an alien; it may limit the preaching of anarchism and forbid treasonable utterances, but it should not shun the national door in the face of one seeking to enkindle discontent. But to exile the heirs to a throne and

THEY ARE TO GO.

It was the apparent scheme of the Ministry that the French Princes should go. The Senate votes to exile them. The Ministry has not, indeed, original responsibility for the scheme, for the fact is that the extremists in the Assembly pushed the policy upon the Cabinet, and it lacked the courage to reject it. We know from all prior expression that the Premier is an opponent of the scheme of expulsion, yet he is a party now to its proposal, as one of the Ministry. Now that the Senate adopts the measure the Government becomes as extremely radical in one direction as the Monarchists are in the other. It boldly inaugurates a policy opposed to the spirit of republicanism, and one calculated to make some of its test friends doubt the cohesive ability of the republic. No Government can afford to confess that it fears an enemy. It may despise and reject an alien; it may limit the preaching of anarchism and forbid treasonable utterances, but it should not shun the national door in the face of one seeking to enkindle discontent. But to exile the heirs to a throne and

THEY ARE TO GO.

It was the apparent scheme of the Ministry that the French Princes should go. The Senate votes to exile them. The Ministry has not, indeed, original responsibility for the scheme, for the fact is that the extremists in the Assembly pushed the policy upon the Cabinet, and it lacked the courage to reject it. We know from all prior expression that the Premier is an opponent of the scheme of expulsion, yet he is a party now to its proposal, as one of the Ministry. Now that the Senate adopts the measure the Government becomes as extremely radical in one direction as the Monarchists are in the other. It boldly inaugurates a policy opposed to the spirit of republicanism, and one calculated to make some of its test friends doubt the cohesive ability of the republic. No Government can afford to confess that it fears an enemy. It may despise and reject an alien; it may limit the preaching of anarchism and forbid treasonable utterances, but it should not shun the national door in the face of one seeking to enkindle discontent. But to exile the heirs to a throne and

THEY ARE TO GO.

It was the apparent scheme of the Ministry that the French Princes should go. The Senate votes to exile them. The Ministry has not, indeed, original responsibility for the scheme, for the fact is that the extremists in the Assembly pushed the policy upon the Cabinet, and it lacked the courage to reject it. We know from all prior expression that the Premier is an opponent of the scheme of expulsion, yet he is a party now to its proposal, as one of the Ministry. Now that the Senate adopts the measure the Government becomes as extremely radical in one direction as the Monarchists are in the other. It boldly inaugurates a policy opposed to the spirit of republicanism, and one calculated to make some of its test friends doubt the cohesive ability of the republic. No Government can afford to confess that it fears an enemy. It may despise and reject an alien; it may limit the preaching of anarchism and forbid treasonable utterances, but it should not shun the national door in the face of one seeking to enkindle discontent. But to exile the heirs to a throne and

THEY ARE TO GO.
It was the apparent scheme of the Ministry that the French Princes should go. The Senate votes to exile them. The Ministry has not, indeed, original responsibility for the scheme, for the fact is that the extremists in the Assembly pushed the policy upon the Cabinet, and it lacked the courage to reject it. We know from all prior expression that the Premier is an opponent of the scheme of expulsion, yet he is a party now to its proposal, as one of the Ministry. Now that the Senate adopts the measure the Government becomes as extremely radical in one direction as the Monarchists are in the other. It boldly inaugurates a policy opposed to the spirit of republicanism, and one calculated to make some of its test friends doubt the cohesive ability of the republic. No Government can afford to confess that it fears an enemy. It may despise and reject an alien; it may limit the preaching of anarchism and forbid treasonable utterances, but it should not shun the national door in the face of one seeking to enkindle discontent. But to exile the heirs to a throne and

THEY ARE TO GO.

It was the apparent scheme of the Ministry that the French Princes should go. The Senate votes to exile them. The Ministry has not, indeed, original responsibility for the scheme, for the fact is that the extremists in the Assembly pushed the policy upon the Cabinet, and it lacked the courage to reject it. We know from all prior expression that the Premier is an opponent of the scheme of expulsion, yet he is a party now to its proposal, as one of the Ministry. Now that the Senate adopts the measure the Government becomes as extremely radical in one direction as the Monarchists are in the other. It boldly inaugurates a policy opposed to the spirit of republicanism, and one calculated to make some of its test friends doubt the cohesive ability of the republic. No Government can afford to confess that it fears an enemy. It may despise and reject an alien; it may limit the preaching of anarchism and forbid treasonable utterances, but it should not shun the national door in the face of one seeking to enkindle discontent. But to exile the heirs to a throne and

THEY ARE TO GO.

It was the apparent scheme of the Ministry that the French Princes should go. The Senate votes to exile them. The Ministry has not, indeed, original responsibility for the scheme, for the fact is that the extremists in the Assembly pushed the policy upon the Cabinet, and it lacked the courage to reject it. We know from all prior expression that the Premier is an opponent of the scheme of expulsion, yet he is a party now to its proposal, as one of the Ministry. Now that the Senate adopts the measure the Government becomes as extremely radical in one direction as the Monarchists are in the other. It boldly inaugurates a policy opposed to the spirit of republicanism, and one calculated to make some of its test friends doubt the cohesive ability of the republic. No Government can afford to confess that it fears an enemy. It may despise and reject an alien; it may limit the preaching of anarchism and forbid treasonable utterances, but it should not shun the national door in the face of one seeking to enkindle discontent. But to exile the heirs to a throne and

THEY ARE TO GO.

It was the apparent scheme of the Ministry that the French Princes should go. The Senate votes to exile them. The Ministry has not, indeed, original responsibility for the scheme, for the fact is that the extremists in the Assembly pushed the policy upon the Cabinet, and it lacked the courage to reject it. We know from all prior expression that the Premier is an opponent of the scheme of expulsion, yet he is a party now to its proposal, as one of the Ministry. Now that the Senate adopts the measure the Government becomes as extremely radical in one direction as the Monarchists are in the other. It boldly inaugurates a policy opposed to the spirit of republicanism, and one calculated to make some of its test friends doubt the cohesive ability of the republic. No Government can afford to confess that it fears an enemy. It may despise and reject an alien; it may limit the preaching of anarchism and forbid treasonable utterances, but it should not shun the national door in the face of one seeking to enkindle discontent. But to exile the heirs to a throne and

THEY ARE TO GO.
It was the apparent scheme of the Ministry that the French Princes should go. The Senate votes to exile them. The Ministry has not, indeed, original responsibility for the scheme, for the fact is that the extremists in the Assembly pushed the policy upon the Cabinet, and it lacked the courage to reject it. We know from all prior expression that the Premier is an opponent of the scheme of expulsion, yet he is a party now to its proposal, as one of the Ministry. Now that the Senate adopts the measure the Government becomes as extremely radical in one direction as the Monarchists are in the other. It boldly inaugurates a policy opposed to the spirit of republicanism, and one calculated to make some of its test friends doubt the cohesive ability of the republic. No Government can afford to confess that it fears an enemy. It may despise and reject an alien; it may limit the preaching of anarchism and forbid treasonable utterances, but it should not shun the national door in the face of one seeking to enkindle discontent. But to exile the heirs to a throne and

THEY ARE TO GO.

It was the apparent scheme of the Ministry that the French Princes should go. The Senate votes to exile them. The Ministry has not, indeed, original responsibility for the scheme, for the fact is that the extremists in the Assembly pushed the policy upon the Cabinet, and it lacked the courage to reject it. We know from all prior expression that the Premier is an opponent of the scheme of expulsion, yet he is a party now to its proposal, as one of the Ministry. Now that the Senate adopts the measure the Government becomes as extremely radical in one direction as the Monarchists are in the other. It boldly inaugurates a policy opposed to the spirit of republicanism, and one calculated to make some of its test friends doubt the cohesive ability of the republic. No Government can afford to confess that it fears an enemy. It may despise and reject an alien; it may limit the preaching of anarchism and forbid treasonable utterances, but it should not shun the national door in the face of one seeking to enkindle discontent. But to exile the heirs to a throne and

THEY ARE TO GO.

It was the apparent scheme of the Ministry that the French Princes should go. The Senate votes to exile them. The Ministry has not, indeed, original responsibility for the scheme, for the fact is that the extremists in the Assembly pushed the policy upon the Cabinet, and it lacked the courage to reject it. We know from all prior expression that the Premier is an opponent of the scheme of expulsion, yet he is a party now to its proposal, as one of the Ministry. Now that the Senate adopts the measure the Government becomes as extremely radical in one direction as the Monarchists are in the other. It boldly inaugurates a policy opposed to the spirit of republicanism, and one calculated to make some of its test friends doubt the cohesive ability of the republic. No Government can afford to confess that it fears an enemy. It may despise and reject an alien; it may limit the preaching of anarchism and forbid treasonable utterances, but it should not shun the national door in the face of one seeking to enkindle discontent. But to exile the heirs to a throne and

THEY ARE TO GO.

It was the apparent scheme of the Ministry that the French Princes should go. The Senate votes to exile them. The Ministry has not, indeed, original responsibility for the scheme, for the fact is that the extremists in the Assembly pushed the policy upon the Cabinet, and it lacked the courage to reject it. We know from all prior expression that the Premier is an opponent of the scheme of expulsion, yet he is a party now to its proposal, as one of the Ministry. Now that the Senate adopts the measure the Government becomes as extremely radical in one direction as the Monarchists are in the other. It boldly inaugurates a policy opposed to the spirit of republicanism, and one calculated to make some of its test friends doubt the cohesive ability of the republic. No Government can afford to confess that it fears an enemy. It may despise and reject an alien; it may limit the preaching of anarchism and forbid treasonable utterances, but it should not shun the national door in the face of one seeking to enkindle discontent. But to exile the heirs to a throne and

THEY ARE TO GO.
It was the apparent scheme of the Ministry that the French Princes should go. The Senate votes to exile them. The Ministry has not, indeed, original responsibility for the scheme, for the fact is that the extremists in the Assembly pushed the policy upon the Cabinet, and it lacked the courage to reject it. We know from all prior expression that the Premier is an opponent of the scheme of expulsion, yet he is a party now to its proposal, as one of the Ministry. Now that the Senate adopts the measure the Government becomes as extremely radical in one direction as the Monarchists are in the other. It boldly inaugurates a policy opposed to the spirit of republicanism, and one calculated to make some of its test friends doubt the cohesive ability of the republic. No Government can afford to confess that it fears an enemy. It may despise and reject an alien; it may limit the preaching of anarchism and forbid treasonable utterances, but it should not shun the national door in the face of one seeking to enkindle discontent. But to exile the heirs to a throne and

THEY ARE TO GO.

It was the apparent scheme of the Ministry that the French Princes should go. The Senate votes to exile them. The Ministry has not, indeed, original responsibility for the scheme, for the fact is that the extremists in the Assembly pushed the policy upon the Cabinet, and it lacked the courage to reject it. We know from all prior expression that the Premier is an opponent of the scheme of expulsion, yet he is a party now to its proposal, as one of the Ministry. Now that the Senate adopts the measure the Government becomes as extremely radical in one direction as the Monarchists are in the other. It boldly inaugurates a policy opposed to the spirit of republicanism, and one calculated to make some of its test friends doubt the cohesive ability of the republic. No Government can afford to confess that it fears an enemy. It may despise and reject an alien; it may limit the preaching of anarchism and forbid treasonable utterances, but it should not shun the national door in the face of one seeking to enkindle discontent. But to exile the heirs to a throne and

THEY ARE TO GO.

It was the apparent scheme of the Ministry that the French Princes should go. The Senate votes to exile them. The Ministry has not, indeed, original responsibility for the scheme, for the fact is that the extremists in the Assembly pushed the policy upon the Cabinet, and it lacked the courage to reject it. We know from all prior expression that the Premier is an opponent of the scheme of expulsion, yet he is a party now to its proposal, as one of the Ministry. Now that the Senate adopts the measure the Government becomes as extremely radical in one direction as the Monarchists are in the other. It boldly inaugurates a policy opposed to the spirit of republicanism, and one calculated to make some of its test friends doubt the cohesive ability of the republic. No Government can afford to confess that it fears an enemy. It may despise and reject an alien; it may limit the preaching of anarchism and forbid treasonable utterances, but it should not shun the national door in the face of one seeking to enkindle discontent. But to exile the heirs to a throne and

THEY ARE TO GO.

It was the apparent scheme of the Ministry that the French Princes should go. The Senate votes to exile them. The Ministry has not, indeed, original responsibility for the scheme, for the fact is that the extremists in the Assembly pushed the policy upon the Cabinet, and it lacked the courage to reject it. We know from all prior expression that the Premier is an opponent of the scheme of expulsion, yet he is a party now to its proposal, as one of the Ministry. Now that the Senate adopts the measure the Government becomes as extremely radical in one direction as the Monarchists are in the other. It boldly inaugurates a policy opposed to the spirit of republicanism, and one calculated to make some of its test friends doubt the cohesive ability of the republic. No Government can afford to confess that it fears an enemy. It may despise and reject an alien; it may limit the preaching of anarchism and forbid treasonable utterances, but it should not shun the national door in the face of one seeking to enkindle discontent. But to exile the heirs to a throne and

THEY ARE TO GO.

It was the apparent scheme of the Ministry that the French Princes should go. The Senate votes to exile them. The Ministry has not, indeed, original responsibility for the scheme, for the fact is that the extremists in the Assembly pushed the policy upon the Cabinet, and it lacked the courage to reject it. We know from all prior expression that the Premier is an opponent of the scheme of expulsion, yet he is a party now to its proposal, as one of the Ministry. Now that the Senate adopts the measure the Government becomes as extremely radical in one direction as the Monarchists are in the other. It boldly inaugurates a policy opposed to the spirit of republicanism, and one calculated to make some of its test friends doubt the cohesive ability of the republic. No Government can afford to confess that it fears an enemy. It may despise and reject an alien; it may limit the preaching of anarchism and forbid treasonable utterances, but it should not shun the national door in the face of one seeking to enkindle discontent. But to exile the heirs to a throne and

THEY ARE TO GO.

It was the apparent scheme of the Ministry that the French Princes should go. The Senate votes to exile them. The Ministry has not, indeed, original responsibility for the scheme, for the fact is that the extremists in the Assembly pushed the policy upon the Cabinet, and it lacked the courage to reject it. We know from all prior expression that the Premier is an opponent of the scheme of expulsion, yet he is a party now to its proposal, as one of the Ministry. Now that the Senate adopts the measure the Government becomes as extremely radical in one direction as the Monarchists are in the other. It boldly inaugurates a policy opposed to the spirit of republicanism, and one calculated to make some of its test friends doubt the cohesive ability of the republic. No Government can afford to confess that it fears an enemy. It may despise and reject an alien; it may limit the preaching of anarchism and forbid treasonable utterances, but it should not shun the national door in the face of one seeking to enkindle discontent. But to exile the heirs to a throne and

THEY ARE TO GO.

It was the apparent scheme of the Ministry that the French Princes should go. The Senate votes to exile them. The Ministry has not, indeed, original responsibility for the scheme, for the fact is that the extremists in the Assembly pushed the policy upon the Cabinet, and it lacked the courage to reject it. We know from all prior expression that the Premier is an opponent of the scheme of expulsion, yet he is a party now to its proposal, as one of the Ministry. Now that the Senate adopts the measure the Government becomes as extremely radical in one direction as the Monarchists are in the other. It boldly inaugurates a policy opposed to the spirit of republicanism, and one calculated to make some of its test friends doubt the cohesive ability of the republic. No Government can afford to confess that it fears an enemy. It may despise and reject an alien; it may limit the preaching of anarchism and forbid treasonable utterances, but it should not shun the national door in the face of one seeking to enkindle discontent. But to exile the heirs to a throne and

THEY ARE TO GO.

It was the apparent scheme of the Ministry that the French Princes should go. The Senate votes to exile them. The Ministry has not, indeed, original responsibility for the scheme, for the fact is that the extremists in the Assembly pushed the policy upon the Cabinet, and it lacked the courage to reject it. We know from all prior expression that the Premier is an opponent of the scheme of expulsion, yet he is a party now to its proposal, as one of the Ministry. Now that the Senate adopts the measure the Government becomes as extremely radical in one direction as the Monarchists are in the other. It boldly inaugurates a policy opposed to the spirit of republicanism, and one calculated to make some of its test friends doubt the cohesive ability of the republic. No Government can afford to confess that it fears an enemy. It may despise and reject an alien; it may limit the preaching of anarchism and forbid treasonable utterances, but it should not shun the national door in the face of one seeking to enkindle discontent. But to exile the heirs to a throne and

THEY ARE TO GO.

It was the apparent scheme of the Ministry that the French Princes should go. The Senate votes to exile them. The Ministry has not, indeed, original responsibility for the scheme, for the fact is that the extremists in the Assembly pushed the policy upon the Cabinet, and it lacked the courage to reject it. We know from all prior expression that the Premier is an opponent of the scheme of expulsion, yet he is a party now to its proposal, as one of the Ministry. Now that the Senate adopts the measure the Government becomes as extremely radical in one direction as the Monarchists are in the other. It boldly inaugurates a policy opposed to the spirit of republicanism, and one calculated to make some of its test friends doubt the cohesive ability of the republic. No Government can afford to confess that it fears an enemy. It may despise and reject an alien; it may limit the preaching of anarchism and forbid treasonable utterances, but it should not shun the national door in the face of one seeking to enkindle discontent. But to exile the heirs to a throne and

THEY ARE TO GO.

It was the apparent scheme of the Ministry that the French Princes should go. The Senate votes to exile them. The Ministry has not, indeed, original responsibility for the scheme, for the fact is that the extremists in the Assembly pushed the policy upon the Cabinet, and it lacked the courage to reject it. We know from all prior expression that the Premier is an opponent of the scheme of expulsion, yet he is a party now to its proposal, as one of the Ministry. Now that the Senate adopts the measure the Government becomes as extremely radical in one direction as the Monarchists are in the other. It boldly inaugurates a policy opposed to the spirit of republicanism, and one calculated to make some of its test friends doubt the cohesive ability of the republic. No Government can afford to confess that it fears an enemy. It may despise and reject an alien; it may limit the preaching of anarchism and forbid treasonable utterances, but it should not shun the national door in the face of one seeking to enkindle discontent. But to exile the heirs to a throne and

THEY ARE TO GO.

It was the apparent scheme of the Ministry that the French Princes should go. The Senate votes to exile them. The Ministry has not, indeed, original responsibility for the scheme, for the fact is that the extremists in the Assembly pushed the policy upon the Cabinet, and it lacked the courage to reject it. We know from all prior expression that the Premier is an opponent of the scheme of expulsion, yet he is a party now to its proposal, as one of the Ministry. Now that the Senate adopts the measure the Government becomes as extremely radical in one direction as the Monarchists are in the other. It boldly inaugurates a policy opposed to the spirit of republicanism, and one calculated to make some of its test friends doubt the cohesive ability of the republic. No Government can afford to confess that it fears an enemy. It may despise and reject an alien; it may limit the preaching of anarchism and forbid treasonable utterances, but it should not shun the national door in the face of one seeking to enkindle discontent. But to exile the heirs to a throne and

THEY ARE TO GO.

It was the apparent scheme of the Ministry that the French Princes should go. The Senate votes to exile them. The Ministry has not, indeed, original responsibility for the scheme, for the fact is that the extremists in the Assembly pushed the policy upon the Cabinet, and it lacked the courage to reject it. We know from all prior expression that the Premier is an opponent of the scheme of expulsion, yet he is a party now to its proposal, as one of the Ministry. Now that the Senate adopts the measure the Government becomes as extremely radical in one direction as the Monarchists are in the other. It boldly inaugurates a policy opposed to the spirit of republicanism, and one calculated to make some of its test friends doubt the cohesive ability of the republic. No Government can afford to confess that it fears an enemy. It may despise and reject an alien; it may limit the preaching of anarchism and forbid treasonable utterances, but it should not sh

